

Marmot Trailway UPF 50 Short 8" – Gear Review

Overview

The Marmot Trailway UPF 50 Short 8" is a lightweight hiking short built for warm-weather hiking, trekking, travel, and everyday outdoor use. Constructed from a recycled nylon blend with built-in stretch, the Trailway combines durability, sun protection, moisture management, and mobility in a streamlined package.

Weight

- Published Weight: 172 g (6.0 oz)
- One of the lightest technical hiking shorts currently offered by Marmot.

Key Specifications

- Weight: 172 g (6.0 oz)
- Inseam: 8 inches
- UPF 50+ sun protection
- Recycled nylon stretch fabric
- PFC-free DWR treatment
- Two hand pockets
- Zippered security pocket
- Best Uses: Hiking, trekking, travel, everyday wear

Comfort & Mobility

The lightweight stretch fabric provides excellent freedom of movement on steep trails and during long hiking days. The material feels soft against the skin while maintaining enough structure for technical outdoor use.

Breathability

The recycled nylon blend offers good airflow and dries quickly after exposure to sweat or light rain. Combined with the low weight, the shorts perform especially well in hot-weather conditions.

Durability

Despite weighing only 172 grams, the Trailway retains the durability expected from a dedicated hiking short. The DWR finish sheds light moisture while the abrasion-resistant fabric stands up well to regular trail use.

Pocket Design

The layout includes traditional hand pockets plus a zippered security pocket for valuables such as keys, cards, or a phone. Storage is intentionally simple to keep weight low and comfort high.

Pros

- Extremely lightweight at 172 g (6.0 oz)
- UPF 50+ sun protection
- Quick drying fabric
- Comfortable stretch construction
- PFC-free DWR finish
- Excellent warm-weather hiking performance

Cons

- Minimal pocket organization
- Less abrasion resistance than heavier softshell shorts
- Limited weather protection in extended rain

Best For

Hikers, travelers, trekkers, and outdoor enthusiasts seeking a lightweight, breathable hiking short for hot climates and active adventures.

Editor's Rating: 9.3 / 10

The Marmot Trailway UPF 50 Short 8" delivers an excellent balance of low weight, mobility, sun protection, and trail comfort. At just 172 g (6.0 oz), it stands out as one of the lighter hiking shorts available while maintaining the durability needed for regular outdoor use.
