Comfort & Mobility

The stretch-woven fabric provides excellent freedom of movement while maintaining a clean, structured appearance. The adjustable waistband helps dial in the fit, and the 5-inch inseam offers a balance of coverage and mobility.

Trail Performance

The Coburn performs well on day hikes, travel adventures, and everyday outdoor activities. It offers greater durability and structure than many ultralight running shorts while remaining impressively lightweight.

Durability

The stretch twill fabric stands up well to repeated trail use and maintains its appearance over time. The fabric offers a strong balance between lightweight comfort and abrasion resistance.

Pocket Design

Hand pockets and a secure zippered pocket provide practical storage while preserving a streamlined appearance suitable for trail-to-town use.

Pros

- Ultralight at 125 g (4.4 oz)
- Excellent trail-to-town versatility
- Durable stretch fabric
- Comfortable adjustable waistband
- Attractive fit and styling
- Secure zippered storage

Cons

- Premium price point
- Less storage than cargo-style hiking shorts
- Not designed for highly technical alpine use

Best For

Women seeking a lightweight hiking short that transitions seamlessly between hiking, travel, and everyday summer wear.

Updated Editor's Rating: 9.4 / 10

With its officially published weight of just 125 g (4.4 oz), the Stio Women's Coburn Short 5" ranks among the lightest hiking shorts in its class. Its combination of comfort, durability, mobility, and everyday style makes it an outstanding choice for hikers and travelers alike.
